

London's Flood Expo Exhibition a Huge Success for Huddersfield-Based Andel

For Immediate Release

Huddersfield-based Andel, the UK's leading designer and manufacturer of specialised leak detection and environmental protection systems for industry and utility providers, has reported a huge success from its attendance at last week's global flood defence industry exhibition at ExCeL, London.

At the event, the company launched its revamped ReBund Flood Defence retrofittable, modular, demountable and permanent flood defence product. The original version of ReBund is already tried and tested, protecting electricity sub stations in many nationwide installations. It has now been adapted for use in any environment, ranging from domestic to industrial premises.

Andel's Commercial Director, Mark Harris said " We are very pleased with the response we received for our latest specialist product innovations. We took enquiries worth over £2m from Government departments, public utilities, insurance companies and commercial organisations. We even had enquiries from sailing clubs, pubs and individual householders".

"Visitors to our stand were very impressed with the cost, unobtrusive appearance, speed of installation and green credentials demonstrated by the range of products we were showcasing," he added.

- Ends -

Editor's Notes:

Founded in 1992, Andel Ltd has a twenty year history in the design, development and application of specialised leak detection and environmental protection systems.

Andel offers a total environment protection for its customers, protecting valuable assets and services, complying with frequently evolving rafts of legislation and safeguarding both built and natural environments.

Customers include air, rail, bus, truck and marine operators, national and local government, health, education, police, fire, rescue and military services, water, gas, electricity and communications, fuel storage and distribution services, banks, retailers and charities.

<http://www.andel.co.uk/>

Press Information:

Chris Shaw

Sure Media Relations

Tel: 01484 696 066

Mobile: 07527 448 650

E-Mail: chris@suremediarelations.co.uk